Concealed and carried into class

By BOBBY BURCH Herald Staff Writer

A bill in the Kansas Legislature might soon allow college students to bring pistols to pottery class.

The measure, however, has rallied opposition from Kansas educators and law enforcement, claiming the bill would further jeopardize safety and place unnecessary burdens on police, students and state institutions.

A bill in the Kansas Legislature might soon allow college students to bring pistols to pottery class. The measure, however, has rallied opposition from Kansas educators and law enforcement, claiming the bill would further jeopardize safety and place unnecessary burdens on police, students and state institutions. Richard Johnson, chief of police at the University of Kansas Medical Center, testified before members of the House Federal and State Affairs Committee regarding the bill.

Why go this route?

Advantages:

- Follow the Newspaper Next model of doing it “Good Enough” because you can’t afford to do more
- Doesn’t require a staff of IT gurus to make it happen
- Stops the erosion of print subscriptions

Disadvantages:

- Doesn’t add new subscribers as quickly as one might hope
- It isn’t fancy with all the bells and whistles the big guys have.
- Your site is a source of irritation to some who believe everything on the web demands to be FREE!
